SCENES IN THE SOUL-STIRRING MARATHON RACE.

That Dorando, the Italian runner who in the Olympic games in London, colsed near the finish and was then carried over the line by the overzealous British games officials is all vividly depicted in pictures shown for the first time in America in The Washington Herald this morning. These show that there was no doubt of the complete triumph for the American, J. J. Hayes, and of the fairness of the decision of the judges, who finally sent up the American flag as a signal that the Italian had been disturned.
